Ruegen Island. Prior to World War II, the two islands were connected by a road bridge which crossed the "Pahler Haken" near wase. It is unknown, whether this bridge was destroyed at the end of the war or not. In view of the financial plight of the GDR which led to considerable cuts in all government construction projects, it is surprising that this bridge, which is of very little economic importance, is to be rebuilt. In any case, the project was not included in the 1954 road bridge construction program of the GDR Ministry of Traffic. It is believed that construction work will be financed by Bezirk Rostock. The Mukran project refers to the improvement of the Sassnitz - Prora concrete road for the KVP.

2. Comment. This bridge is on the Danzig - Stargard - Altdamm - Stettin highway, an important east-west route. In view of the priority demanded by the Soviets for the rehabilitation of all east-west highways, the reported reconstruction of the bridge, which is now in Polish occupied territory, appears probable.
